BOISE NATIONAL FOREST

There currently are 6 administrative units on the Forest: Mountain Home, Idaho City, Lowman, Cascade, and Emmett Ranger Districts and the Lucky Peak Nursery. Comprising the seventh largest National Forest in the United States, the Boise National Forest's 2.6 million acres provide diverse opportunities in resource management. Elevations range from 2,600 to 9,800 feet. The mountainous landscape developed through uplifting, faulting, and stream cutting. Most of the land lies within the Idaho Batholith, a large and highly erodible geologic formation.

CASCADE RANGER DISTRICT

The Cascade Ranger District is the northern most District on the Boise National Forest. Encompassing approximately 450,000 acres, the District offers a diverse resource management program including: Recreation, Wildlife, Fisheries, Timber, Range and Watershed. The small town of Cascade is nestled in the mountains of central Idaho approximately 75 miles north of Boise on Highway 55. It is located in Long Valley between the North Fork of the Payette River (known for its world-class kayaking) and Cascade Lake (one of the top fisheries in Idaho). The Cascade Ranger District offers year-round outdoor sports and recreation opportunities for everyone.

Cascade: Cascade is a rural community in Idaho and the county seat of Valley County, Idaho in the west central part of the state. It sits at an elevation of 4780 feet (1457 m), along the North Fork of the Payette River. The 2009 population is estimated at 972. Cascade is located on the southeast shore of Lake Cascade, formed after the completion of Cascade Dam on the north side of the community. The recreational city of McCall is 29 miles (46 km) north, and the village of Donnelly is a little over midway, via Highway 55. Tamarack Resort is across the reservoir to the northwest. Cascade is approximately 75 miles (112 km) north of Boise, accessed via State Highway 55, the Payette River Scenic Byway. For further information: <http://cascadechamber.com/>
